DISCOVER URBINITE

Who's an Urbinite?

Anyone who lives in a city or loves city life. Traditionally, the word is spelled with an "a" but since Urbinite is all about you, we replaced the "a" with "i" to emphasize that we want you to selfishly explore your interests.

who we are

Urbinite is a growing community for people who are interested in fashion to meet each other virtually and hear from those who are immersed in it.

We host virtual events with designers, fashionistas, and industry experts on how to break into the industry, what's new in fashion, and so much more. Eventually, we will be able to meet in person but for now, subscribe to our newsletter and attend our virtual events.

THE FUTURE

Urbinite will be an app where you explore your interests through niche events, meet new people, and stay connected with each other. This isn't an app where you make friends through swiping but through shared experiences.

Love the concept but not interested in fashion? Don't worry. As we grow, we'll be adding more interests and communities. Just sign up for the waitlist.

Are environmentally-friendly mass produced items truly sustainable?

Discussion in Trends

Longchamp recently came out with their MY PLIAGE SIGNATURE bags. Basically, you can customize them however you want with the relief of knowing that they're eco-friendly. But if a bag is mass-produced,

Velour Tracksuits: once a relic of the past, now making a resurgence

Discussion in Trends

It's hard to believe that just 5 years ago, Harper's Bazar reported that the Juicy Couture tracksuit became such a relic that it became a part of an exhibit in the London V&A Museum. Kim Kardashian's
